

Journey through the portal

As I was wandering around the city with my friends we heard shrieking across the street. I was so confused about what was happening. We followed the voices of the shrieking until we found people screaming as they got sucked up in a giant portal, making them end up in a completely different world with no way back. I was really curious about how the portal looked and where it came from. I was about to tell my friends now knowing that they already ran away. Thunder started to rumble, lightning started to appear, the wind started howling. Sooner or later there was no one in the city anymore except for me. I needed to find my friends but they were nowhere to be found. That's when I found them floating in the wind holding onto a pole while holding each other's legs. I ran to them forgetting about the portal. When I tried to grab them I got sucked up in the portal along with my friends. But then I smelt something good, it smelt like bacons and eggs? It was just a dream.
